NOTES

(1) Pine Tree/‘Sang Moo Sa’ is not WTF-recognized but has passed BS/EN testing.
(2) BSI: British Standards Institute. Same as European (CEN) standards.
(3) Trunk protectors must be the type approved for WTF taekwondo. Old style WTF or other martial arts’ trunk protectors are not acceptable.
(4) Tested to British Standards and therefore acceptable but not WTF-approved.
(5) Hanji, Aprovwin, RDX, JM Fitness and Better brands of WTF-style hand protector may have the WTF logo but they are not WTF-recognised and are not acceptable.
(6) KTA-approved or other brands of products will only be acceptable if they are also approved by the WTF or ETU, or have passed British or European standards tests.
(7) The CE mark is not proof that equipment has been tested to British or European standards. Manufacturers can use the CE mark if they have tested goods themselves, in-house, but British Taekwondo can only accept certified test results from independent, accredited testing houses.
(8) Macho equipment is not WTF-recognized and never has been. Some Macho equipment on sale incorrectly has the old ‘WTF-recognized’ mark.

Appendix C: Notice and Waiver Regarding the Use of Mats

British Taekwondo endeavours to make participation in its sport as safe as reasonably possible.

To this end, British Taekwondo has developed a comprehensive Health and Safety Policy, as well as detailed Event Regulations, both of which include strict requirements, as well as guidance, relating to safety measures.

However, because of the nature of WTF Taekwondo, it is impossible to eliminate all risk from participating in this sport, whether in a training session or in competition. This is not least because the member clubs, through whom participation typically takes place, have limited resources. In particular, it is not possible for many clubs to lay down flooring mats in their training venues for the purposes of training sessions (including full contact sparring sessions). This is because the cost of purchasing a sufficient quantity of mats, the cost and need to store them and the time it would take to lay them out before and after training sessions are prohibitive.

It is important that those who apply for membership of British Taekwondo appreciate this and appreciate that, if they participate in training sessions at British Taekwondo member clubs in such circumstances, they do so voluntarily, with full awareness of the risks involved and consciously agreeing not to make a claim against British Taekwondo, the relevant club or associated individuals should an accident occur due to the absence of flooring mats.

Accidents are rare but the possibility of them cannot be ruled out completely.

In summary, by applying to be a member of British Taekwondo you agree and accept the following:

1. You understand that for logistical and financial reasons it is not possible for every club to lay down mats or equivalent safety flooring during training sessions, including full contact sparring sessions.

2. You also understand and agree that if you wish to participate in those sessions, then you agree to do so:

   a. with full awareness of the risks involved and the extent of those risks, including that it is possible that you may fall and injure yourself in doing so

   b. that you have voluntarily chosen to participate to whatever extent you wish and are not in any way compelled to participate

   c. that you consciously waive the right to claim against British Taekwondo or the relevant club or their respective directors’, officers’, management and coaching staff in respect of any loss or damage arising out of such participation, to the fullest extent that you are able to do so by law.
